

ART GUIDE

Houstonians Count

This is a call to action for A Counting—a project by artist Ekene Ijeoma and his group Poetic Justice at MIT Media Lab. We encourage all Houstonians to become a part of this participatory project by calling 281-248-8730.

Are you yearning to engage during this time of social distancing? Or is your child learning to count?

There are over 100 languages spoken in Houston, Texas. A Counting seeks to capture “voice portraits” of Houstonian voices and accents, especially those of marginalized communities.

To participate, if you are a Houston resident, call 281-248-8730 to record counting from 1 to 100 in your native language. Individuals of all ages from around the world are invited to contribute to the project so be sure to add your voice to A Counting today!

ART GUIDE

Not a Houstonian? Everyone is welcome to participate in A Counting either through helping with transcription, listening to the voices that are recorded, or viewing the video work.

A Counting is accessible by visiting camh.org/beyond or by calling 281-248-8730.

BONUS

Check back on A Counting site at <https://a-counting.us/?city=hou> regularly as new voices are added and the work changes through time.

Houstonians Count

This is a call to action for A Counting—a project by artist Ekene Ijeoma and his group Poetic Justice at MIT Media Lab. We encourage all Houstonians to become a part of this participatory project by calling 281-248-8730.

Share this project with anyone that might be interested in contributing their voice using the hashtags #ConnectWithCAMH and #MuseumFromHome.